Daryl Rowlands from Heswall has been offered a place on the acting course at the National Youth Theatre after her recent audition.

Daryl told Heswall Magazine: "This year they had an extra 1,500 applicants (totalling nearly 7,500 auditions this year). There are only 500 places and I am fortunate enough to have been offered one! As I will be in London for four weeks, I would like to try to gain some sponsorship. I would be extremely grateful if anyone could help me."

The National Youth Theatre has trained the likes of Daniel Craig, Idris Elba, Helen Mirren and Kate Winslet. The course starts in the last week of July and finishes the last week of August. As this year has seen the highest number of applicants, Daryl has worked hard to gain a coveted place on the course.

Daryl said: "The course is £998, which I am currently saving for to pay for myself, but the trip to London, as well as travel and food, is going to cost me over £1,000. I am looking to raise as much as I can."

"I work extremely hard and I'm very passionate about my acting. I am currently involved in three shows, two of which are for non-profit theatre companies and another is for a dramaturge's PhD thesis. I have acting classes every week and I am writing my own play."
