Are you finding it difficult to get wax removed from your ears? In the past, it's been a simple procedure of booking an appointment with your doctor and within a day or two you'd pop along and they would wash the wax out for you. Well, those days seem like a distant memory. Due to ongoing cuts to the NHS and with the workload for doctors and nurses increasing year-on-year, people often find it can be a week to even get to see the doctor, whereupon an appointment is made for anywhere between two to four weeks after that for the wax to be removed. In some areas people are waiting up to eight weeks for wax removal. Worse still, if you have a demanding wax issue such as narrow ear canals and/or impacted earwax which manages to resist all attempts by syringing, then an ENT appointment may be required for microsuction which is the 'go-to' procedure for difficult wax removal. We've been told by some of our patients that the wait for this particular procedure is anywhere between three to six months.

BUT WHY WAIT, WE CAN REMOVE THE WAX TODAY!

Hi, I'm Ian Waring and I run and own Hearing Expert in Greasby. My team of fully trained colleagues and I remove earwax quickly, painlessly and can often offer an appointment on the same day. Abersoch Half Marathon

Ben Adams, Director at Hewitt Adams in Heswall, recently completed the Abersoch Half Marathon in 1 hour 50 minutes.

Ben told Heswall Magazine: "I raised just shy of £500 for St John's Hospice. This will be the first of many fundraisers Hewitt Adams plan to do for the Hospice. Daniel Hewitt will be dusting off his trainers next time around!

"I was happy with my time as it is one of the hilliest courses in the country. I was running with a good friend Shaun Goodacre who I 'comprehensively' beat by a whole 10 seconds with a Bolt-esque sprint finish up the beach."
