

Volunteering at Ness Botanic Gardens

If you love plants, gardens and meeting people, come and join us!

Anyone can volunteer. It doesn't matter what your skills, experience or background are.

We usually ask for half a day a week – but if you want to do more, you would be welcome!

Here at Ness Botanic Gardens we are reliant on the continuing support of a wide-ranging team of volunteers to underpin our operation. Volunteer time given to the Gardens, and the structures and activities which sustain them, is equivalent to approximately 10 full-time members of staff annually, which enables us to provide the current range and level of services.

While we recognise that volunteers are not quite the same as staff, we also understand that staff and volunteers alike are all working together to run the Ness Botanic Gardens to the highest possible standards and to enable their enjoyment by future generations.

Ness Botanic Gardens is, therefore, committed to providing all its volunteers with the right training and equipment to enable them to perform to the highest standards. In return we ask that volunteers work closely with staff, help implement our policies and processes, and overall support the excellent customer experience we aspire to provide.

Volunteering has been a crucial part of the Ness story for over half a century and we look forward to many more successful years, as together we take the Ness Botanic Gardens into an exciting future.
